

Back to regular view Print this page

Lemont school a weather station

May 13, 2008 FROM SUBMITTED REPORTS

 Recommend

LEMONT -- Lemont High School is now a part of the WeatherBug Network, which allows WGN-TV viewers access to powerful, precise and accurate weather information.

WGN Chief Meteorologist Tom Skilling has access to more than 150 local weather tracking stations in the Chicago area, and the MotionCam perched atop Lemont High School will assist in providing images for WGN weather coverage.

Skilling and the WGN Weathercenter Team incorporate live weather data and video into their weather coverage from WeatherBug tracking stations and cameras, which are located atop schools and public buildings throughout the Chicago area. WGN also taps into a national network of 8,000 tracking stations, providing real-time weather data on the air and online.

Users can download WeatherBug to their computer desktops to have instant access to their own neighborhood weather conditions and up-to-the-minute customized severe weather alerts.

The WGN WeatherBug network may be utilized by visiting wgntv.trb.com and clicking on WeatherBug on the left side of the page.

- WeatherBug Launches Weather Widget for \$60

From Darla Mack

- Free WeatherBug Direct Application For Blackberry

From BerryReview

POWERED BY  BlogBurst The views expressed in these blog posts are those of the author and not of the Sun-Times News Group.

READER COMMENTS: